FERRIS AND LOUD WINNERS

NEARLY ENTIRE STATE and COUNTY REPUBLICAN TICKET ELECTED. WHITELEY ELECTED REPRESENTATIVE. SMITH AND CODY ELECTED BY NARROW MARGINS.

The election of last Tuesday showed the usual Republican strength in most of the offices voted for. In the closely contested offices partisanship was thrown to the winds and the candidates received the greatest consideration among the voters.

WOODBRIDGE N. FERRIS

Woodbridge N. Ferris, who was re-elected governor of Michigan, has apparently a plurality of 30,000 votes in the state. The balance of the Republican state ticket was elected by large pluralities.

George Loud, Republican candidate for congress, had a majority of 5000 votes over Congressman Roy Woodruff, the Progressive candidate.

GEORGE LOUD

Harry H. Whiteley, Republican, defeated Frank Smith, Democrat, for the office of representative by a large majority.

In the office for sheriff of this county William H. Cody lead the other two candidates by a plurality of 24 votes. Here is where the biggest fight was put up. Each candidate had been working hard for several weeks, besides having influential friends out working in their interests. It was a pretty three cornered fight and nobody knew until the votes were counted just who would win.

John J. Niederer, Republican, was easily elected over Chris King, Progressive, by a majority of 269.

Allen B. Failing, Republican candidate for register was re-elected over John Floeter, Democrat, by 251 votes and Ralph Hanna, Progressive, by 343 votes.

The fight for treasurer gave the present incumbent Edward S. Houghton, Republican, 393, and William Moshier, Progressive, 236.

Oscar Palmer, Republican, was defeated for the office of prosecuting attorney by a majority of five votes by Glen Smith, Democrat.

S. N. Insley and Andrew Brown were elected to the office of coroner by large majorities.

Edward S. Houghton was re-elected surveyor, he being the only candidate on the ticket for that office.

The part taken by the voters of Crawford county for the state, congressional, legislative and county offices is shown complete in the tabulated report that appears on the fourth page of the Avalanche. This report, we believe, is absolutely correct, however it may possibly vary a trifle in a few instances.

AMID SHRAPNEL FIRE WRITER SEES FIERCE CONFLICT ON THE YSER RIVER

By EDGAR ANSEL MOWRER.
(Correspondent Chicago Daily News)
West Flanders, Belgium.—For more than a week I have been at the headquarters of the Belgian army behind the line of the River Yser from Nieuport to Dixmude. I have seen how the remnants of the army from Antwerp retreating on the way to Ostend were sent to northern France to rest and reorganize and how the rest of the Belgian forces, being asked to hold the lines 42 hours, have actually held it for six days, thus preventing a siege of Dunkirk and saving the French coast from invasion.

Stick to Antwerp to last.

Contrary to what was at first reported, the Belgian army left Antwerp only after all the forts except four had been destroyed, and these four the defenders blew up as they hastily evacuated the town, the hero of Belgian, General de Gusal, remaining to the last. What part of the retreating Belgians entered Holland and are held by Dutch authorities is not known here.

It is certain that the others never would have escaped the Germans but for the heroic stand made by a mixed force of English, Belgians and French marines in the village of Nelle, south west of Ghent, wherein two Belgian regiments—the Sixth volunteers and the Ninth of the line—particularly distinguished themselves.

Walks From Dunkirk to France.

I reached Furnes October 16, having walked from Dunkirk, I crossed a bridge, reached a village street and after two turns emerged on the quaint old market place of Furnes, the home and present seat of the general headquarters of the Belgian army. I went at once to the headquarters in the town hall, made known my identity and secured a pass.

Standing before the headquarters was an automobile containing three British soldiers. I approached and asked the nearest one where the Germans were. He looked at me with astonishment and before replying or letting me explain who I was and why I had come, he exclaimed: "Good Lord! Have they let you come this far? Well, since you are here, it can do no harm to tell you where they are." He drew a map from his pocket. "Here they are," he said, laying a finger on the village of Middlekerke. "Our line extends from Nieuport to Dixmude. The Belgians are entrenched all along the line."

Starts Out for Nieuport.

I thanked the soldiers and set out to walk to Nieuport. On the outskirts of Furnes I passed a regiment of Belgians starting for Dixmude. I turned to the left in the direction of Nieuport, but at the village of Wulpen I was turned back by an overpolite Belgian sergeant.

That night I heard a terrible cannonading, and Saturday morning, October 17, I learned that the battle of the Yser had begun. This battle, which had not yet come to an end, itself is only a part of the greater battle of which it is likely to be the center. Small though it is in the number of troops engaged, the battle of the Yser presents three distinct phases, according to the nature of the ground.

About eight miles east of Furnes lies the town of Dixmude, where the attack began. The Belgians here had been re-enforced by 5,000 French marine infantry, these marines forming the first line of defense, 400 yards beyond the town and on the right bank of the Yser. The Germans attacked with great violence about nine o'clock Friday evening. Marines who figured in the battle estimate their opponents' strength at 20,000. The attack continued until daybreak on Saturday, when the marines, ably assisted by French and Belgian batteries placed behind the town, drove back the onslaught with considerable loss.

Reaches the Belgian Trenches.

When I reached the Belgian batteries and trenches about eleven a.m. Saturday the former were keeping up a steady fire. Some of the Belgian batteries lying in the trenches which had been the second line of defense tried to deter me from continuing farther, as the shrapnel fire was rather heavy at this point, but I proceeded until I reached about one kilometer (six-tenths of a mile) on this side of the town. A Belgian lieutenant previously had given me permission to go one kilometer beyond the town to a position which, as I learned later, would have put me exactly between the opposing forces and in full line with the rifle fire.

Tells English Officer's Bravery.

We were joined in our sky-light by a Belgian captain who asked us for the loan of our glasses and when he had seen all that he desired he told us the story of the English lieutenant who had landed that morning, the particulars of which he had just learned. This officer came ashore from the monitor Sternen with 20 men and three machine guns to prevent the Belgian retreat.

Reaching Nieuport, he saw that in losing Groote Bamberghe farm that morning the Belgians had weakened their position. Accordingly, he started with his 20 men across the bullet-swept area right to the Belgian trenches. The men who were there say he walked as calmly as if on a tour of inspection, calling orders to his men and signaling with his hands. In vain the Belgian officers shouted that the position was already occupied by the Germans. Either he did not hear or he was determined to accomplish the task at all costs.

Destiny broods and is silent over matters of this kind. When 50 yards from the coveted goal the young officer fell dead, a bullet having struck him between the eyes. The men retreated, still carrying the guns with them and with the memory of a hero in their minds.

OPERA SINGER MAKES SHOES WHILE PRISONER

New York.—After having cracked stone and made shoes for eight weeks as a German prisoner in a French detention camp near Paris, Albert R. Reiss, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera company, arrived here from Havre, a passenger on the liner Chicago.

Mr. Reiss, although a German, had lived in Paris 10 years. When the French government moved to Bordeaux, he said, he was arrested and sent to a camp six miles from Paris, where he lived in a slaughter house for eight weeks on a diet of codfish and mussels. He was made to crack stones for concrete, he asserted, until his hands became sore; then he was set to making shoes. He was released through the efforts of the American state department. Mr. Reiss said he had no ill feeling against the French, but regarded his detention as a precaution, necessitated by conditions.

fear of death, but the result of the unearthly sound.

Entering the church, I found it full of straw, the pews evidently having been used as a dormitory for soldiers, but nothing had been touched, though chairs were scattered everywhere. After mounting a rickety ladder a long time in the dark I reached the very top of the steeple above the bell.

Sees Battle From Steeple.

Looking through my glasses over the flat country in the direction of the town, I was able to distinguish the very spots and buildings beyond which the Belgian shells were bursting. Flames were leaping high, but owing to a row of trees screening the German batteries I was unable to see what was burning. At that time the town itself was intact.

To the left stretched the poplar bordered Yser. I could see men sheltered in trenches along the roadside—trenches so cut as to provide a shelter covering, upon which was heaped straw making a watertight roof. In front, about six hundred yards distant, a regiment was drawn up, but I was unable to learn the reason why.

In company with an English correspondent, at that time the only other correspondent with the Belgians, I saw the battle of Nieuport at close range. Long before we reached the village of Nieuport Baines we saw part of the naval squadron lying just off the coast occasionally firing at some unseen mark and heard field artillery booming ahead.

Heard Batteries in the Dunes.

We heard the Belgian batteries firing in the dunes on our right toward Nieuport and only when we reached the south pier at the mouth of the Yser could we obtain any idea of the general situation, the lines at this point being held by the Sixth and Seventh Belgian infantry. The day was cloudy and the wind was driving the mist of rain inland. Accordingly, we sought a high, deserted building that stood nearest the river. When we finally stuck our heads through the skylight, by the aid of our glasses we saw an unforgettable sight.

At our feet lay the railroad station at the mouth of the River Yser, which stretched away right to the town of Nieuport, then bent southward, and was hidden from view by the building in which we were. Behind the river, hidden in a grove of scrubby trees growing on the dunes, were three Belgian batteries of four guns each, which were firing incessantly straight across before us. The shells were striking beyond the village of Lombartzyde.

Thirteen Warships in Sight.

To the left, beyond Lombartzyde, was the village of Westende, which the Germans had retaken that morning. Still farther away the church spire of Middlekerke was faintly visible. Lombartzyde seemed quiet, but German shells bursting over it presently located the Belgian trenches before which we were. Behind the river, hidden in a grove of scrubby trees growing on the dunes, were three Belgian batteries of four guns each, which were firing incessantly straight across before us. The shells were striking beyond the village of Lombartzyde.

The note which Great Britain presented to Turkey on Friday, demanding an explanation of the actions of the Turkish fleet in the Black sea and the dismantling of the former German cruisers, the Goeben and the Breslau, was really an ultimatum to which Turkey was required to make a reply by Saturday evening.

Allies Gain Near Ypres.

The French statement says that repeated German attacks in the vicinity of Ypres have been repelled and that the allies have made progress both north and east of that city. Hollenbeck and Messines, which were taken by the Germans, have been recaptured.

The British troops south of Passchendaele were forced to cede some ground, which later was recaptured.

A significant statement bearing on the developments in Belgium is contained in the following message from the Exchange Telegraph company's correspondent at The Hague:

"Several trains filled with cannon and submarine bound from Germany to the Belgian coast and destined for the attack on the English coast, have passed through Liege, but have been stopped at Bruges until further notice, the attack on England having been postponed until the present battle is decided."

Clans Capture of Germans.

London, Nov. 2.—A dispatch from Northern France to the Times says:

"A report has been received that as the result of the blowing up of a railway bridge by a Belgian cyclist corps a large German force was cut off from the main army and surrounded in a body. The prisoners are said to number many thousands."

Statement Issued by Germans.

Berlin, Nov. 2.—The statement issued by the German army headquarters said:

"The operations in Belgium have been made difficult owing to inundations of the Yser and the Ypres canals by the destruction of the sluices at Nieuport. Our troops have advanced near Ypres. At least 600 prisoners were captured; also some British guns."

"The forces fighting to the westward of Lille also have progressed."

"A number of prisoners were taken near Vailly—about 1,500. In the region of Verdun and Toul there has been only insignificant fighting."

Dikes Opened by Belgians.

London, Nov. 1.—It has been expected for weeks that, yielding to German pressure and promises, Turkey would break its neutrality and do some belligerent act.

Six hundred German officers have arrived in Turkey since the war began. They brought siege guns, field guns and ammunition with them.

It is computed that Turkey has from 600,000 to 700,000 men ready to take the field. The German officers put the number at 800,000.

The menace of Turkey's action lies in the possibility of a "holy war" by Mohammedans against Christians. She undoubtedly will attempt to incite to revolt the great mass of Mohammedan subjects of Great Britain in Asia and Africa.

Italy to Enter War.

Italy's hand is expected soon to be forced. France has looked to Italy to dominate the Balkans, and in the present crisis with Turkey's army, numbering between 700,000 and 800,000, thrown into the conflict, she cannot do so by continuing to be neutral.

Greece is also likely to enter the war at once. She will, of course, oppose her ancient enemy, the Turks. Roumania probably will do likewise.

NORWAY.

The views expressed by a Norwegian admiral in the Christiania Morgenbladet of September 24 may be taken as typical of what has been said in Europe of the affair: "The efforts of the English to blockade the Baltic and the North sea have been given their death sentence since a German submarine with a crew of 20 men managed to break through the cordon established, travel some two hundred sea miles and from its base and slip about easily in the waters controlled by the English fleet. That the three cruisers were old does not mean anything. The fate that overtook them can overtake tomorrow the entire English battle fleet. The North sea and the Baltic are no longer in the possession of the blockading English armored monsters. A new era with a new method has begun for the small powers when they will be able to maintain a large number of these cheap and efficient sea arms, and in so doing even up things with a powerful enemy whose greater resources permitted him to build up a navy entirely beyond the means of small governments."

Rev. A. Weenaa has celebrated his semicentennial jubilee as a minister of the gospel. He started his career in the northern part of Norway, and in 1869 was called as professor of theology at the theological seminary of the Scandinavian Augustana synod at Paxton, Ill. He continued this work at Marshall, Wis., and at Augsburg seminary, Minneapolis, Minn. In 1876 he returned to Norway and served a congregation in Telenarken. A few years later he again went to America, and occupied a chair at the Red Wing seminary, but in 1884 returned to Norway for good. Since that time he has served parishes in Namdal, Sondmore and Nes, and is now parish priest at the place last mentioned. In the early seventies he was a great power in the Norwegian-Danish conference of America, and the newspaper articles and pamphlets which he contributed to the church controversies of his day were widely read. Rev. Weenaa is seventy-nine years old.

Capt. Roald Amundsen stated to a reporter that the Fram will soon be laid up at Horten. The trusty old vessel needs a thorough overhauling. If it is found that the repairs will cost more than the money saved up by Captain Amundsen he said that he would dispose of some of the provisions stored up at Horten and in Christiania. There is no sense in keeping those provisions indefinitely. But if the Fram can be put in serviceable shape with a reasonable outlay of money he wants to dispose only of certain brands of canned goods which experience has taught him to be difficult to preserve for any great length of time. Captain Amundsen states that when he gave up the government appropriation offered him he did not intend to give up the arctic expedition, for which he has been making preparations for several years past.

About one hundred burial mounds not known to archeologists until now were discovered last summer by a man sent out by the university. All of them are in Simnaenene. There are 20 mounds at the Prestegard forest, and the others are scattered in the same neighborhood, which is known by the name of Skiptvedt. The discoverer was often mistaken for a spy when he explored the country, and occasionally his whereabouts were reported to the sheriff.

Orjan Olsen's expedition to Siberia should have stayed away to the end of October. But it returned to Christiania September 20 on account of the war. The sources of the Yenisei river were traced. The scientific result of the expedition was very good. The collections had to be left in Siberia on account of the embargo placed on exports.

Wedel-Jarlsberg, Norway's minister to France, has recently demonstrated his bravery. He visited the battle front in northern France and went so close to the firing line that his automobile was hit by the fragment of a shell and his driver was killed. From his wrecked automobile the minister made his way to safety on foot through a hall of bullets.

The Norwegian-South American steamship line is a success. By means of special arrangements for ventilation the ships of the company can preserve fish and fish goods more easily than can be done by carriers that re-load the goods on the way.

The work on the new navigation school at Ekeberg is somewhat retarded by the war, but it will continue until the plant is ready. One of its features will be a radio station at which the students can learn to handle wireless messages.

Mr. Oppedal, one of the leading journalists of Norway, is going to spend almost half a year in America for the purpose of opening up avenues of trade for Norwegian exports. He is going to visit all the great industrial centers of the country.

Extensive beds of iron ore have been discovered near Mol station, Dalene. The percentage of iron runs from 62 to 67. Some Englishmen had planned to develop the property, but the war stopped the enterprise for the time being.

DENMARK.

A farmer who had an old span of horses met a horse dealer in Vello. The farmer bravely asked $200 for the horses. The dealer offered $175. The dealer soon weakened, however, and the farmer was rather surprised that it was so easy to get $200 for such an old span of horses. But the farmer was still more surprised when the horse dealer handed him $400. The two had evidently misunderstood each other as to the number of horses involved in the deal. But the farmer managed to keep his face straight and pocketed the money.

Copenhagen.—Edward D. Winslow, American consul general here, says that the Americans, many of whom were stranded here because of the European war, have nearly all left for home and that the next sailing will clear the decks. "The kind treatment given by the Danish people to the Americans will never be forgotten," says Mr. Winslow. "On leaving all have expressed their best wishes for Denmark and its people."

Danish wool has not had a very good reputation during the last few years and manufacturers of woolen goods have been in the habit of buying wool from Belgium and Holland. At the present time much wool will be needed for blankets for the army. So the manufacturers have to turn to the home market on account of the war. They have to pay a stiff price, but they are glad to get it at that.

As the fiscal year is drawing to a close the accounts of the national treasury indicate a more favorable showing than was expected by those who prepared the budget. The accounts for the year 1912-1913 were $5,300,000 ahead of the budget, and this time the difference is expected to be about $4,000,000.

A Danish mine in the Big Belt is supposed to have exploded in the night. No ship passed over the mines. But a porpoise may have struck the mine or hit it with his tail. A loud report was heard at Korsor and Halskov, and also on board the warships in the belt. On land it was observed as an earthquake.

SWEDEN.

A lengthy telegram from Stockholm explains that the Swedes originally sympathized with the Germans. But in the course of time the Germans have caused trouble to Swedish shipping, while Russia and England have shown an unmistakable disposition to be perfectly fair to Sweden. The result, says the telegram, is that the minds of the Swedes are experiencing a change in favor of the allies. The Swedes are strictly neutral, but they cannot help sympathizing with the Germans, as they have done for centuries past.

The government has ascertained that the timber owned by private parties is better cared for from year to year. The great lumbering companies in Norrland seem to take the lead, and some of them spend large sums for draining swampy lands. In other parts of the country even the owners of small tracts of timber are endeavoring to apply general rules of systematic forestry.

Work will soon begin on the new city hall of Stockholm. It is going to be a grand building. There is no pressing need for the building, but work will be commenced on it at this time in order to furnish employment during the hard times.

A Stockholm tailor, who has a garden at Enskede, planted seven quarts of potatoes last spring and this fall harvested 130 quarts of the finest potatoes. One potato weighed over two pounds.

The railway department has asked the government to spend about $1,500,000 for rolling stock during the next 12 months in order to employ at least a part of the men who otherwise will be out of work.

The minister of war refuses the assurance that the Swedish army is short of firearms. He says that there are enough rifles and heavier firearms of different kinds for the most serious eventualities.

G. W. Sandberg has been connected with the post office department of Sweden for 60 years. The king awarded him a gold medal for long and faithful service.

The railway department has asked the government to permit said department to pay half wages to those railway employees who are serving in the army.

The government has issued a warning to the Swedish people to stay in the country as long as the seas of the north are strown with mines. It also pointed out that besides the risk of being blown up at sea it is also difficult to obtain work in foreign countries.

The birds of passage began to leave Sweden early this fall. This is taken to mean that winter will come rather early. But a still stronger indication of an early winter is the low temperature prevailing in the country.

According to the new conscript laws of Sweden every young man must report for military duty at the age of nineteen. Those who are to serve in the navy have to spend 300 days in training, those in the coast artillery 365 days, and those in the army 365 days.

The receipts of the post office department for the first half of this year were $4,386,350, an increase of almost $300,000 as compared with the figures for the corresponding part of the year 1912.

THE CEREAL PROBLEM.

In most families cereal is served once a day. We have such a variety to choose from that we might have a different one each day if waste and expense were not to be considered.

Many cereals are eaten and enjoyed with fruit that would be otherwise refused. The daintiness of serving the cereal and fruit bears no small part in the manner of its reception. As variety is the spice of life, as well as other things, it is well to change often the form of serving the same food. When cooking cream of wheat mold it and fill the center with fruit of the season and have it served at the table after the eye has been charmed with the sight. Such a dish will be greeted with pleasure and if accompanied with cream will quickly disappear. For the cool fall days more heavy, rich foods are needed; cornmeal mush and hominy are good and any leftover may be fried.

The use of the uncooked cereals is a great saver of time and fuel and many prefer them. They combine well with fats, and combined with bananas make a most appetizing breakfast dish.

All dry prepared cereals should be crisped in the oven before serving. Whole wheat, fresh from the field, after long cooking makes one of the best of breakfast foods. It will need to be soaked over night and cooked long and slowly to bring out the flavor and soften the fiber. A fireless cooker or double boiler makes a most desirable way of cooking wheat.

Cooked cereals may be served as dessert with cream and fruit. Oatmeal with sliced apples, a cherry on each slice. Sauté the apple in butter until tender and serve the cereal on each slice.

A spoonful of sliced peaches or berries on the side of the cereal dish is another simple combination.

Wheat with pineapple. A mold of cooked cream of wheat with the center filled with slices of pineapple rolled into petals makes a most dainty looking dish.

Cooked cereals may be served as dessert with cream and fruit. Oatmeal with sliced apples, a cherry on each slice. Sauté the apple in butter until tender and serve the cereal on each slice.

Cinnamon Cream Tart.—Beat a teaspoonful of butter, add a half cupful of powdered sugar and a half tea-spoonful of cinnamon in bowl. Place a half dozen crackers which have been split and placed hollow side up in a baking pan, drop a spoonful of this mixture in each half and bake for two minutes in a hot oven.

Cream Candy.—To a pint of water add a pint of sugar and two table-spoonfuls of vinegar, boil until it hardens to a firm ball, pour on buttered plates and pull when cool.

Entered as second-class matter at the Postoffice Grayling, Mich., under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

GRAYLING, THURSDAY, NOV. 5

THE VOTES of the people in the election of the various successful candidates at the election last Tuesday may not in all cases express the choice of the majority of the voters. In fact, with three large political parties in the field, this will rarely be the case.

Governor Ferris with his immense popularity received less than half the votes cast. Right here at home in the case of Cody, May and Goodar for sheriff, Cody was elected by only 308 out of 753 votes, yet it was evident that there were more voters who wanted Cody than there were who wanted either of the other two candidates. The same with Louie for congress. In such three-sided contests there are generally more voters who are against the successful candidate than there are for him.

However the candidate who gets the greatest vote is elected and then he is our governor or our sheriff, as the case may be and it is only fair that we all give these officers as able backing and encouragement, in the discharge of their duties, as may be within our power to give. It was impossible to vote for all the good men on the tickets, but if our favorite candidate was not successful, there is no good reason why we should lay stones in the other fellow's road by sharp criticism, harsh words or otherwise—it would be as much of an insult to the people who helped to elect him as it would be to the officer himself and only reflect upon the slanderer.

We cannot always have the office holders we want but when the people make a choice let us stay by that choice with our loyal support.

GRAYLING SOCIAL CLUB

Opened Season With Hallowe'en Dancing Party.

The beginning of the social season for the Grayling Social Club occurred on Hallowe'en night with a six-o'clock dinner, cards and dancing.

About fifty members and a few invited friends sat down to a delicious three course dinner. The tables were decorated appropriate to the Hallowe'en spirit with old Pumpkin-Face predominating; they were peering out from almost every nook and corner. The chandeliers, ceiling and side walls were trimmed in yellow.

At each place at the tables were favors in the shape of rolled paper napkins. These gave out loud reports upon being opened, and also contained a variety of souvenirs and paper caps of various colors, which were donned by the banqueters.

Dozens of Japanese "oranges" were lighted just before the guests left the table, which sent up showers of fiery sparks and made a very pretty spectacle.

Clark's orchestra furnished music during the banquet and dance and as usual it was excellent.

This was the opening party and bids fair to be one of the most enjoyable of the season. Everybody had a good time and but few left before the last dance was finished.

Mrs. Carl Michelson, of Mason, was a guest of the evening.

"CREATION" DELIGHTFUL.

Reels Tell Wonderful Story of Old Testament.

A delightful sense of reality accompanies the pictures of "Creation" being shown at the opera house, as the reels unfold the wonderful story of the Old Testament.

Even the skeptic "who comes to scoff" remains to wonder at the significant scenes on the motion picture screen, depicting in every day reality what, to so many, has been mere legend.

All seats at the exhibition are free and no collection is taken. It is announced that all expenses have been met.

"Creation" is divided in four parts.

A new part will be shown each day, beginning Wednesday and continuing until and including Saturday at 3:00 and 8:45 p.m.

Miss Ada Grant of Gaylord is a patient at Stoney Hospital, receiving treatment for an attack of rheumatism. She is also being treated for nerve trouble.

There will be a balled dinner given at the G. A. R. Hall Saturday, Nov. 10th, under the auspices of the Orange Order. Everyone is cordially invited to come. Expenses to 25¢.

Don't forget the chicken pie supper at the opera house next Wednesday, Nov. 14th. There will be pumpkin pie and all sorts of other good things to eat. The price will be 25¢.

The Junior Aid was wisely entertained at the home of Miss Leora Ellsworth last evening. As usual the evening was spent in sewing, and very refreshing refreshments were served.

Ray E. Amidon returned to Petoskey last Saturday after a two weeks' visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cass. Amidon, Mr. Amidon has a good position in one of the largest jewelry stores in Petoskey.

New Gymnasium for Grayling. There has for a long time back been more or less talk among the people of Grayling about a gymnasium, but it has always seemed as if some one was lacking to make a start.

The Danish Young People's society have at length, through a letter received from a Danish gymnasium teacher in Omaha who offered his services, decided to build. They will build on the plot of ground generally known as the "Newman Place," which was given to them by Mr. R. Hansen, and for which they are very thankful. This is an ideal place and the young people are elated over the prospects of what they can do with it. It is up on a hill and overlooks the river and they hope in time to have tennis courts and croquet grounds in connection with the gymnasium. Of course they probably won't have all these things right away, but if everybody will only join hands and help them it will surely be a success.

This building will be thirty-six feet wide and sixty feet long with a basement under the entire building. The ground was broken for the basement last week, and if the weather permits the foundation will be up in a very short time. An effort will be made to have everything as modern as possible.

This fund with which they expect to start to build was raised by popular subscription among the Danish people and their liberal donations show that they are interested.

Through the winter they expect to have a fair and perhaps plays or anything by which they can raise some money and they sincerely hope that everybody will help them.

It must be distinctly understood that this gymnasium will be for everybody who cares to be a member and not for the Danish people alone as some may suppose. A membership fee will be charged and all will be eligible regardless of age or nationality.

Now for the hearty co-operation of everybody.

Back Again, Better Than Ever. The great Kelley & Brennan Dramatic Co. will open a week's engagement at the Temple theatre, Grayling, commencing Monday night, Nov. 9th.

New plays, new faces, new vaudevilles and all special scenery; nothing old but the price—10-20-30cts. Some of the feature plays to be seen during the week, "Paid in Full," "Man of the Hour," "The Wolf," "The World and a Woman," "The Bells," "Old Kentucky" and the great opening play, "Human Hearts."

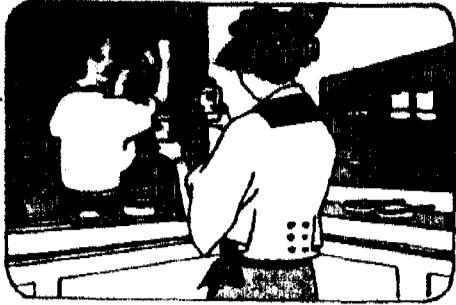

One lady will be admitted free on Monday night when accompanied by a person holding a paid 30¢ reserved seat ticket, which can be secured at Olson's drug store.

SYNOPSIS.

At their home on the frontier between the United States and Canada, Mrs. Westerling, mother of Captain Lanstron, and her mother, entertaining Colonel Westerling of the Grays, see Captain Partow, Staff Intelligence Officer of the Browns, Indians, a tall, pale, melancholic but years later, Westerling, nominal vice but real chief of staff, reinforces South Lee Tir, meditated on war, and speculated. Marta, who is visiting in the Gray capital, Westerling calls on Marta. She tells him of her teaching children the follies of war, even while he is chief of staff, and predicts that if he makes war against the world, he will not win. On the march with the Grays, she sees Captain Stransky, anarchist, desertion war and played-out patriot and is placed under arrest. Colonel Lanstron overbearing, begs him to release her. He refuses. Marta goes to see him, and he reveals his secret. He talks with Feller, the gardener. Marta tells Lanstron that she believes Feller to be a spy. Lanstron confesses it is true. Feller has come to play a secret message under the tower for use in the Browns' war emergencies. Lanstron demands his love for Marta. Marta reveals the Grays' plan to use all their international affair to foment warlike patriotism in army and people and strike before deciding war. Partow, the Browns' and Lanstron, made peace, discuss the trouble, and the Brown defenses. Partow reveals his plans to Lanstron. The tiny arm crossed the border line and started. The Grays struck them. Artillery engage. Stransky, rising to the occasion, the anarchist spirit of his life, draws the Grays' fire. The Grays' war propaganda splinter he goes berserk and fights "all men." Marta has her first glimpse of war in its modern, cold, scientific, murderous brutality.

CHAPTER X—Continued.

This was the very thing to whip her thoughts back from the knoll. He was thunderstruck at the transformation: hot color in her cheeks, eyes aflame, lips curving around a whirlwind of words.

"You name the very reason why I wish to stay. Why do you want to save the women? Why shouldn't they bear their share? Why don't you want them to see men mowed down? Is it because you are ashamed of your profession? Why, I ask?"

The problem of dealing with an angry woman breaking a shell fire of questions over his head had not been ready solved in the captain's curriculum like other professional problems, nor was it mentioned in the official instructions about the defenses of the Galland house. He aimed to smile soothingly in the helplessness of man in presence of feminine fury.

"It is an old custom," he was saying, but she had turned away.

"Lanny's plan—mow them down! mow them down! mow them down!" she went on, more to herself than to him.

Was there nothing for her to do? Could she only look on in a fever of restlessness while action roared around her? The sight of several automobile ambulances in the road at the foot of the garden stilled the throb of distraction in her temples with an answer. The wounded! They were already coming in from the field. She hurried down the terrace steps. The major surgeon in charge, surprised to find any woman in the vicinity, was about to tell her so automatically; then, in view of her intensity, he waited for her to speak.

"You will let us do something for them?" Marta asked. "We will make them some hot soup."

He was immediately businesslike. No less than Dellarme or Fracasse or Lanstron or Westerling, he had been preparing throughout his professional career for this hour. The detail of caring for the men who were down had been worked out no less systematically than that of wounding them.

"Thank you, no! We don't want to waste time," he replied. "We must get them away with all speed so that the ambulances may return promptly. It's only a fifteen-minute run to the hospital, where every comfort and appliance are ready and where they will be given the right things to eat."

"Then we will give them some wine!" Marta persisted.

"Not if we can prevent it! Not to start hemorrhages! The field doctors have brandy for use when advisable, and there is brandy in all the ambulances."

Clearly, volunteer service was not wanted. There was no room at the immediate front for Florence Nightingales in the modern machine of war. "Then water?"

The major surgeon aimed to be patient to an earnest, attractive young woman.

"We have sterilized water—we have everything," he explained. "If we hadn't at this early stage I ought to be serving an apprenticeship in a village apothecary shop. Anything that means confusion, delay, unnecessary excitement is bad and unmerciful."

Marta was not yet at the end of her resources. The recollection of the dyed private who had asked her mother for a rose in the last war flashed into mind.

"You haven't any flowers! They won't do any harm, even if they aren't sterilized. The wounded like flowers, don't they? Don't you like flowers? Look! We've millions!"

"Yes, I do. They do. A good idea. Bring all the flowers you want to."

The major surgeon's smile to Marta was not altogether on account of her suggestion. "It ought to help anybody who was ever wounded anywhere in the world to have you give him a flower!" he was thinking.

She ran for an armful of blossoms and was back before the arrival of the first wounded man who preceded the stretchers on foot. He was holding up a hand bound in white first-aid bandage which had a red spot in the center. Those hit in hand or arm, if the surgeon's glance justified it, were sent on up the road to point a mile distant, where transportation in requisitioned vehicles was provided. These men were triumphant in their cheerfulness. They were alive; they had done their duty, and they had the proof of it in the coming souvenirs of two regiments, and particularly of two companies, and that is story enough. If you would grasp the whole, multiply the conflict on the knoll by ten thousand.

There had been the engrossment of transcendent emotion in repelling the charge. What followed was like some grim and passionless truce with triggers ticking off the slow-passing minutes. Dellarme aimed to keep down the fusillade from Fracasse's trench and yet not to neglect the fair targets of the reserves advancing by rushes to the support of the 128th. Reinforced, the gray streak at the bottom of the slope poured in a heavier fire. Above the steady crackle of bullets sent and the whistle of bullets received rose the cry of "Doctor! Doctor!" which meant each time that another Brown rifle had been silenced. The litter bearers, hard pressed to remove the wounded, left the dead. All-ready death was a familiar sight—an article of exchange in which Dellarme's men dealt freely. The man at Stransky's side had been killed outright. He lay face down on his rifle stock. His cap had fallen off. Stransky put it back on the man's head, and the example was followed in other cases. It was a good idea to keep up a show of a full line of caps to the enemy.

Suddenly, as by command, the fire from the base of the knoll ceased altogether. Dellarme understood at once what this meant—the next step in the course of a systematic, irresistible approach by superior numbers. It was to allow the ground scouts to advance. Individual gray spots detaching themselves from the gray streak began to crawl upward in search of dead spaces where the contour of the ground would furnish some protection from the blaze of bullets from the crest.

"Over their heads! Don't try to hit them!" Dellarme passed the word.

"That's it! Spare one to get a dozen!" said Stransky, grinning in ready comprehension. He seemed to be grinning every time that Dellarme looked in that direction. He was plainly enjoying himself. His restless hands had found sport to its taste.

The creeping scouts must have signaled back good news, for groups began crawling slowly after them. "Over their heads! Encourage them!" Dellarme commanded.

"Hole no bigger than a lead-pencil. I'll be back in a week!"

"Yes; don't these little bullets make neat little holes?"

"We certainly gave them a surprise when they came up the hill! I wonder if we missed the fellow that jumped into the shell crater!"

"Our company got it worst!"

"Not any worse than ours. I'll wager!"

"Oh—oh—can't you go easier? Oh—oh—" the groan ending in a clutching of the teeth.

"Hello, Jake! You here, too, and going in my automobile? And we've both got lower berths!"

"Shh! That poor chap's dying!"

Worst of all to Marta was the case of a shrapnel fracture of the cranium,

"I Want to Kiss a Good Woman's Hand by Way of Apology."

Again Dellarme looked toward regimental headquarters, his fixed, cheery smile not wholly masking the appeal in his eyes. The Grays had only two or three hundred yards to go when they should make their next charge in order to reach the crest. But his men had fifteen hundred to go in the valley before they were out of range. After their brave resistance facing the enemy they would receive a hall of bullets in their backs. This was the time to withdraw if there were to be assurance of a safe retreat. But there was no signal. Until there was, he must remain.

The trench grew; the day wore on. Two rifles to one were now playing against his devoted company, which had had neither food nor drink since early morning. As he scanned his thinning line he saw a look of bloodlessness and hopelessness gathering on the set faces of which he had grown so fond during this ordeal. Some of the men were cringing too much for effective aim.

"See that you fire low! Keep your heads up!" he called. "For your homes, your country and your God! Pass the word along!"

Parched throat after parched throat repeated the message hoarsely and leader shoulders raised a trifle and dust-matted eyelashes narrowed sharply on the sights.

"For the man in us!" growled Stransky. "For the favor of nature at birth that gave us the right to wear trousers instead of skirts! For the joy of hell, give them hell!"

"For our homes! For the man in us!" he repeated, swallowing the words as if they had the taste of a stimulant.

But Dellarme knew that it would not take much to precipitate a break. He himself felt that he had been on the resulting delirium, in which the sufferer's incoherence included memories of childhood scenes, moments on the firing-line, calls for his mother, and prayers to be put out of misery. A prod of the hypodermic from the major surgeon, and "On the operating table in fifteen minutes" was the answer to Marta's question if the poor fellow would live.

Until dark, in groups, at intervals, and again singly, the wounded were coming in from a brigade front in the region where the rifles were crackling and the shrapnel clouds were hanging prettily over the hills; and stretchers were being slipped into place in the ambulances, while Marta kept at her post.

"We shan't have much more to do at this station," said the major surgeon when a plodding section of infantry in retreat arrived.

CHAPTER XI.

At the Galland House.

Every unit engrossed in his own work! Every man taught how a weak link may break a chain and realising himself as a link and only a link! The captain of engineers forgot Marta's existence as an error of his subordinates caught his eye, and he went to caution the axmen to cut closer to the ground, as stumps gave cover for riflemen. For the time being he had no more interest in the knoll than in the wreckage of the dirigibles which were down and out of the fight.

After all, the knoll was only a single point on the vast staff map—only one of many points of struggle whose progress was bulletined through the siftings of regimental, brigade, division and corps headquarters in retreat to the staff. Partow and Lanstron overlooked all. Their knowledge made the vast map live under their eyes. But our concern is with the story of two regiments, and particularly of two companies, and that is story enough. If you would grasp the whole, multiply the conflict on the knoll by ten thousand.

There had been the engrossment of transcendent emotion in repelling the charge. What followed was like some grim and passionless truce with triggers ticking off the slow-passing minutes.

Dellarme aimed to keep down the fusillade from Fracasse's trench and yet not to neglect the fair targets of the reserves advancing by rushes to the support of the 128th.

Reinforced, the gray streak at the bottom of the slope poured in a heavier fire.

ceived rose the cry of "Doctor! Doctor!" which meant each time that an-

ced. The litter bearers, hard pressed to Every fourth man wormed himself backward on his stomach until he was below the skyline, when his stiffened limbs brought him to his feet and he started on a dead run down into the valley and toward a cut behind another knoll across the road from the Galland house. The others followed at intervals.

Once across a road and up three series of steps of the other garden terrace, behind a breastwork of sandbags, the company rested. Most of them had fallen asleep on the ground after finishing their rations, logs of men in animal exhaustion. Some of those awake were too weary to give to each other more than a nod and a smile. They had witnessed too much horror that day to talk about it. But Stransky foraged.

Maria, coming out on the veranda, saw him.

"You are tired! You are hungry!"

"I am," she said with urgent gentleness.

"Come in!"

He followed her into the house and dropped on a leather chair before a shining table in a room panelled with oak, wondering at her and at himself. No woman of Marta's world had ever spoken in that way to him. But it was good to sit down. Then a maid with a sad, winsome face and tender eyes brought him wine and bread and cold meat and jam. He gulped down a glassful of wine; he ate with great mouthfuls in the ravenous call of healthy, exhausted tissues, while the maid stood by to cut more bread.

"When it comes to eating after fighting..."

He looked up when the first pangs of hunger were assuaged. Enormous, broad-shouldered, physical, his cheeks flushed with wine, his eyes opened wide and brilliant with the fire that was in his nature—eyes that spoke the red business of anarchy and war.

"Say, but you're pretty!"

Springing up, he caught her hand and made to kiss her in the brazeness of impulse. Minna struck him a stinging blow in the face. He received it as a master would receive a bite from a pup, and she stood her ground, her eyes challenging his fearlessly.

"So, you are like that!" he said thoughtfully. "It was a good one, and you meant it, too."

"Decidedly!" she answered. "There's more where that came from!"

Then little Clarissa Eileen entered and pressed against her mother's skirts, subjecting Stransky to childhood's scrutiny. He waved a finger together in a squint at the bridge of his nose, making a funny face that brought a laugh.

"Your child?" Stransky asked Minna.

"Yes."

"Where's her father? Away fighting?"

"Oh," he mused. "Was that blow for him at the same time as for me?" he pursued thoughtfully.

"Yes, for all of your kind."

"M-m-m!" came from between his lips as he rose. "Would you mind holding on to my hand?" he asked with a gentleness singularly out of keeping with his rough aspect.

"Why?" she demanded.

"I've never studied any books of etiquette, but I know the right to wear trousers instead of skirts! For the joy of hell, give them hell!"

"For our homes! For the man in us!" he repeated, swallowing the words as if they had the taste of a stimulant.

But Dellarme knew that it would not take much to precipitate a break. He himself felt that he had been on

At Old Mission this fall there was a fine yield of apples, and in that part of the Grand Traverse peninsula there were found some of the largest apples ever seen there. One of the large ones was on the farm of John Holmes, a Bietigheimer, which measured 14½ inches around the largest circumference. The apple was a perfect specimen, smooth and round, and it is told from Old Mission if it eats like some of the others on the same trees this special specimen will be as famous for its eating quality as for its size, which places it in the front class of all Michigan apples.

HELPING MICHIGAN DISPOSE OF ITS BUMPER CROP OF APPLES

Heavy Crop of Snow Apples in the Orchard of Amos Link, Benzonia, Mich.

By M. J. DANIELS.

The 1914 crop of western and northern Michigan apples was of the bumper kind. The apple day observances on October 20 helped to cut down the great surplus, when the city people got away with hundreds of barrels in a strenuous effort to help the farmer dispose of all the crop they possibly could. In factories the owners bought many apples and distributed them to their help; the banks also bought many and passed them out to all callers during the day; in the schools scores of barrels were handed out to the pupils after a lecture had been given on the growth and present-day culture of apples; in almost every walk of life in the city apples were as free as water, and the alarming surplus was reduced in a helpful manner.

Through western Michigan the sight of tree limbs being bent to the ground with the great crop has been a common one this fall. The accompanying view in the orchard of Amos Link, Benzonia, Benzie county, shows how his crop of Snow apples looked on September 11. The trees were early morning until dusk digging and picking up the potatoes, and practically all farm work in that section of the state has been laid aside for the time being in favor of the potato work.

Incidental to potato digging and delivery is the building of good roads. Wexford county during next season will get seven new miles of good roads. There should have been two built this year, but the commissioners did not get all done, and will have two additional to the regular annual allowance of five miles. Wexford county now has more miles of well-built roads than any other county in the state, population considered. The situation of Cadillac in the extreme southeastern corner of the county has made it necessary to provide good roads so that the farmers will take their products there rather than to Traverse City or any other nearby good market.

WILL BOOM POTATO GROWING.

L. H. Van Frank of Elkhart, Ind., is conferring with business men of Gaylord looking to the establishment there of a factory to make potato chips and potato starch. Mr. Van Frank is now engaged in that line of business and sees great possibilities for another factory in Gaylord in the heart of a famous potato country.

The factory, if started there, will use 800 bushels of potatoes a day and will thereby give a great boom to potato growing. Forty people would be employed in the plant. Only best quality potatoes would be utilized, and farmers would have to make improvement on the stock they grow.

There have already been very light frosts in Missaukee county, but practically no damage has been done to potatoes. A few in the low places have been nipped, but not seriously damaged. Those crops located on high lands are perfectly safe and are growing rapidly. The rainfall this season until two weeks ago was ideal, but the fact that cool weather followed the late rains has prevented any serious harm from the extra heavy water fall.

FILMED STORY OF EARTH ENCOMPASSES VAST FIELD

Harmony Found in Science, History and Bible.
Talking Machine Co-operates In Entertainment.

ABRAHAM'S JESUS AND THE RICH YOUNG RULER

THE EXODUS FROM EGYPT

The moving picture show has long been hailed as a device of the Devil, but in about one hundred cities of the world it is being used as a means of giving Biblical instruction. It is not cold formalism or abstruse dogma, but living, breathing religion, which appeals to both heart and intellect. "The devil need not have all the good times," said Wesley, and he took the best and set words to them. So the International Bible Students Association has taken the moving picture film and talking machine, enlisting them in the service of righteousness.

Characters of Antiquity Seen.

Witnessing "Creation" we may see moving on the canvas, with every semblance of reality, the outstanding figures of history, with whom reading and study have made us familiar. Philosophers, statesmen, warriors, princes, potentates, scholars and artists pass in fascinating succession before our eyes, acting the parts which were played by those characters when they were on earth's stage in actuality. We see the Garden of Eden as an ingenious imagination stimulated by Biblical research pictures it for us. We view the stately cities of antiquity and their modern successors. We sweep over the world with ever increasing interest from the time of our remotest ancestors, forward as the scroll of history unrolls, and when we rise from our seats we feel that the part has been made for us a living reality instead of the dried bones of historical chronicle.

Lectures Synchronously Given.

Ably supplementing the combination of films, pictures and panoramas are a series of descriptive and scientific lectures which are delivered by a photograph. These records are said to be the finest in existence. The emanation is so distinct and clear that their message is carried to the most distant seats in the largest auditoriums. The talking machines are so accurately timed and geared that they accompany the presentation on the screen with remarkable precision. The lectures and pictures are so effectively synchronized that many who attend the performances believe the lectures to be delivered by some orator of exceptional talent, personally present though hidden from view.

Several reels of film telling most impressive and inspiring stories from both Old and New Testaments are said to have been actually secured in the Old World as near the locations where the events were enacted as possible.

Sacred subjects have been treated with becoming reverence, and there is nothing in their presentation to offend the most sensitive. At the same time the dramatic power of the stories have been fully realized; there are few secular picture-dramas which can compare with the tragedy of Pharaoh or Saul, and which are as deep in their pathos as the story of Elisha and the Shunammite's son.

The presentation of the drama complete requires eight hours each of the four parts lasting two hours. The first part traces creation from prehistoric times, depicting the formation of our planet and its preparation for human habitation. Then is shown the development of plant and animal life; next the creation of Adam and Eve, and their subsequent disobedience and banishment from Eden. Further along comes a brief survey of the Antediluvian Age, followed by important events in the lives of Noah, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

The first character presented in part two is Melchizedec, who was termed "That winter when my little boy had a cold and coughed dreadfully. Upon the advice of a druggist I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and it benefited him at once. I find it the best cough medicine for children because it is pleasant to take. They do not object to taking it," writes Mrs. J. B. Cook, Indiana, Pa. "It cut the phlegm and relieved his coughing spells. I am most grateful for what this remedy has done for him." For sale by all dealers. Adv.

These great pictures will be shown at the Grayling Opera House every afternoon at 3:00 o'clock and evening at 8:45. Admission free to all.

We have thirty-seven enrolled now in the second grade.

Elise Scott entered the second grade Monday of this week.

The rhetoric class has started the study of "Silas Marner."

The fifth grade are enjoying the story of "Beautiful Joe."

The physics class is making a study of the six simple machines.

Seventeen pupils were excused Friday afternoon for perfect attendance.

The third grade are keeping account of the days on their weather calendar.

Six of the A class pupils of the first grade entered the second grade Monday.

There were twenty-seven Jack-o'-lanterns at the first grade Hallowe'en party.

Over thirty pupils of the fifth grade were neither tardy nor absent during October.

Eighteen of the first grade A class received stars for good reading for the past month.

John Phelps is absent from the third grade and is taking a trip east with his parents.

The fifth grade has five names on the E honor roll, seven on the G-plus and eleven on the G.

"Aus Nah and Fern" is a German paper recently placed on the reading table for the high school pupils.

The A class of the sixth grade are interested in making maps of the different sections of states as they study them.

Oiga Nielsen, Bernice McNeven, Nyland Houghton, Emerson Brown, Mito Nielsen and Herman Hanson are on E honor roll for October.

The first number on our entertainment course will be given by the Chicago Musical Club, Thursday evening, Nov. 19. This will be an especially fine attraction. It will be better than the best number we had last season. This number alone is well worth the price of a season ticket. Reserved seats will be on sale at the Central drug store Saturday morning, Nov. 14, at nine o'clock.

Part three extends from Daniel's time to Jesus' advent and includes His earthly experiences. His miraculous birth is taught, and His boyhood pictured. The Lord's baptism is illustrated together with His daily intercourse with the twelve apostles and the multitudes. His performance of miracles, etc. This section closes with the triumphant entry into Jerusalem, the Gethsemane agony, the appearances before the High Priest and Pontius Pilate, and the final test of the Savior's loyalty and endurance on Golgotha. The resurrection and glorification of the risen Lord are also forcefully represented.

The period from Pentecost down through the "Dark Ages" to the present era is reviewed in part four, and by the light of prophecy some future happenings are pictorially described. Films in this section of the drama secured in Oriental lands depict conditions there and emphasize the urgent need for the establishment of Christ's Kingdom in all the earth.

Parents, have you examined your child's report card? If not, call for it at once. Take note of the number of cases of absence and tardiness. Your co-operation is solicited in helping to reduce the number to the minimum.

Did he get a passing mark in each subject? If not, now is the time to get busy. It will be useless to wait until the last two weeks of the semester before making a special effort. Nothing but diligent work now will prevent failure.

Printed Stationery for Farmers.

Every farmer who owns his farm ought to have printed stationery, with his name, the name of his postoffice properly given. The printed heading might also give the names of whatever crop he specializes in, or his specialties in stock. Neatly printed stationery gives you a personality and a standing with any person or firm whom you write and insures the proper reading of your name and address.

If you wish to write to your congressman or member of the legislature, or if you have a request to make of your county superintendent of schools, or if you wish information from any business house, in any case your letter will have increased weight and receive more and quicker attention if you use printed stationery.

Get the habit. Come into the Avalanche office and have us print you 300 sheets of good paper with envelopes to match. It will be one of the best investments you ever made.

The Christmas Thought.

Ideas on Christmas giving are rapidly changing among the sensible. Those who think as they give are looking for a year-round service as the important thing.

In a week of shopping, with all its strain, you will not find a better gift than a year's subscription to The Youth's Companion. It offers its service, its clean entertainment, its fine suggestiveness week after week; and the end of the year, which finds many a gift in the attic, dust-covered and forgotten, brings The Companion again, with all the charm of last Christmastide.

No American monthly at any price offers the same amount of reading quality. Less than four cents a week provides this best of Christmas gifts—$2.00 a year. If you subscribe now, all the remaining issues of the year will be sent free, and The Home Calendar, a copy of the Calendar is also sent to those who make a gift subscription. Send for sample copies, and the forecast for 1915.

THE YOUTH'S COMPANION,
144 Berkeley St., Boston, Mass.
Or new subscriptions will be received at the Avalanche office.

Remarkable Cure of Croup.

"Last winter when my little boy had croup I got him a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I honestly believe it saved his life," writes Mrs. J. B. Cook, Indiana, Pa. "It cut the phlegm and relieved his coughing spells. I am most grateful for what this remedy has done for him." For sale by all dealers. Adv.

Dependency Due to Indigestion.

It is not at all surprising that persons who have indigestion become discouraged and disengaged. Here are a few words of hope and cheer for them by Mrs. Blanche Boers, Indiana, Pa. "For years my digestion was so poor that I could only eat the lightest foods. I tried everything that I heard of to get relief, but not until about a year ago, when I saw Chamberlain's Tablets advertised and got a bottle of them, did I find the right treatment. I soon began to improve, and since taking a few bottles of them my digestion is fine." For sale by all dealers. Adv.
